Officers of the General Prosecutor's Office, the General Police Department, the General Agency for Child and Family Development and Protection, the province, Capital City, Transport, district and inter-soum prosecutor's offices, and the agencies and divisions under the General Police Department are taking part in the consultation in person and online.

Representatives of the Supreme Court, the National Human Rights Commission and civil society organisations also took part and gave presentations.

The prosecution service has been taking phased measures to protect the rights and legitimate interests of children, strengthen inter-agency cooperation, and foster a child-centred, human rights-based approach.

Within this framework, a discussion and training on “CHILD PROTECTION – COOPERATION” was organised jointly with the police in April 2026.

Today's consultation is of great importance in view of the amendments to the primary Law on Adjudication of Family Cases in Court and other related laws and the new legislative regulations that are due to enter into force on November 1, 2026, as it helps participants to understand and apply them uniformly in practice, to work in a manner appropriate to children's age, psychology and developmental characteristics, and to acquire the knowledge and methods needed to effectively protect the rights and legitimate interests of children.
