"Child Protection – Application of Law" Handbook Published

The prosecution service is implementing measures in stages to protect the rights and legitimate interests of children, to give priority to the best interests of the child, and to foster a child-centred, human rights-based approach in case proceedings.

Within this framework, in cooperation with the police, through the “Child Protection Compact Partnership: Protecting Children from Human Trafficking” project and with the support of the international organisations World Vision and The Asia Foundation, a discussion and training on the theme “Child Protection – Cooperation” was organised in April 2026.

As part of this event, handbooks were developed for staff of public administration bodies in charge of child and family development as well as for investigators and prosecutors, covering the proceedings in cases in which children are victims or involved, the age and psychological characteristics of children, methods of communicating with children, and international legal regulations on protecting the best interests of the child, and were distributed for official use.

The State Great Khural (Parliament) adopted the primary Law on the Adjudication of Family Cases and made amendments to the Criminal Code, the Law on Infringements, the Criminal Procedure Law and other laws, improving the legal regulation on protecting the rights of children, with the changes taking effect from November 1, 2026.

In this connection, the prosecution service has developed and published the “Child Protection – Application of Law” handbook for prosecutors, staff of public administration bodies in charge of child and family development, law enforcement officers and investigators, with the aim of ensuring uniform understanding and application of the new legislative provisions in practice, protecting the rights and legitimate interests of children, and improving human rights-based skills in applying the law in a manner consistent with the best interests, age, psychology and developmental characteristics of the child.

This handbook is aimed at fostering a uniform understanding of the application of law and improving the quality and effectiveness of investigation and case proceedings.
