Surveillance Is a Crime!

In Mongolia, the authority to investigate crimes and to track down offenders rests solely with the “investigative agencies.”

The act of a person who is not authorized to conduct investigative operations installing a device on someone's personal belongings or vehicle and tracking their location is considered a crime, and the law provides for imprisonment for a period of up to 5 years.

Therefore, the prosecution service calls on citizens to take precautions against becoming victims of the crime of “illegal surveillance,” as well as against becoming involved in such a crime.
