Training Held as Part of Preparations for Introducing Electronic Case Files

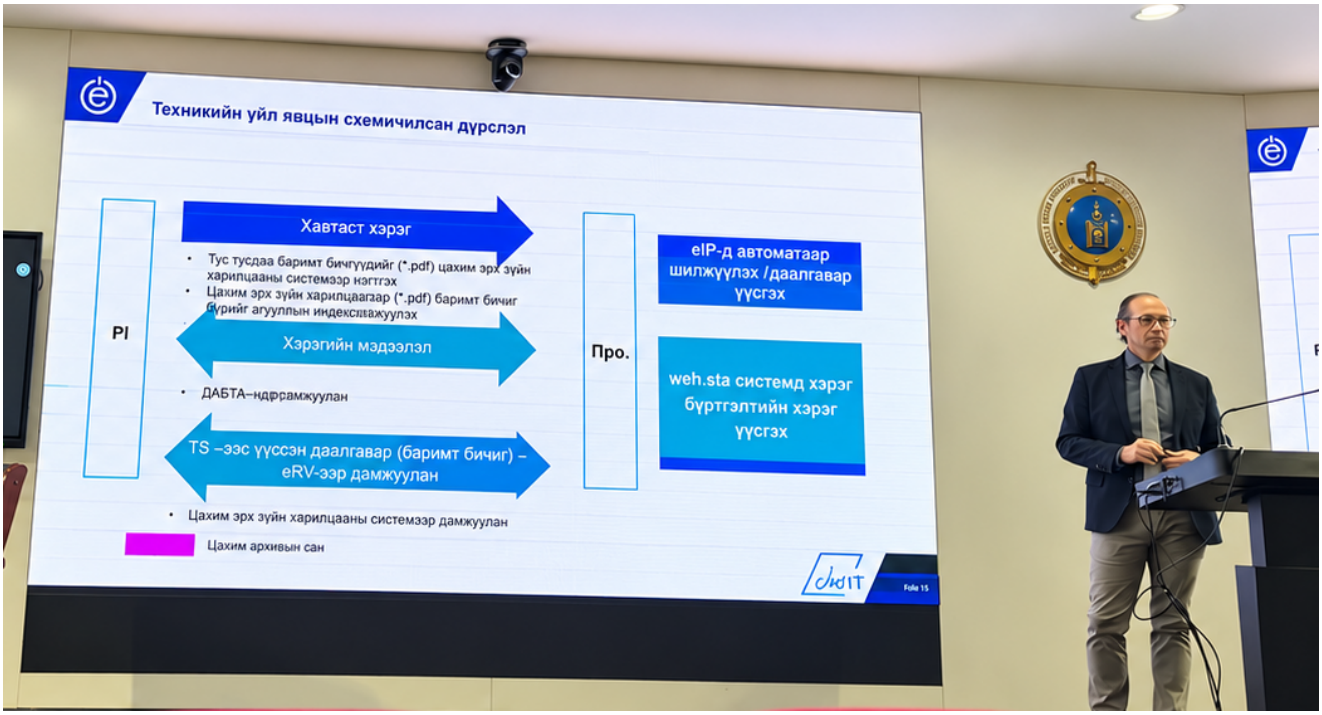

Within the framework of the project “Legal Advice for the Implementation of the Just Transition and Capacity Development of Judicial Institutions” of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ), a training session to prepare for the introduction of electronic criminal case files was held from October 4 to October 9, 2026, at the Training and Research Institute under the General Prosecutor's Office.

The training was attended by members of a working group established by order of the Prosecutor General and tasked with integrating and connecting the electronic databases of the prosecution service and investigative agencies, defining the technological solutions for the electronic case file system, and improving the legal framework.

The training was conducted by Dr. Stefan Priller, Deputy Chief Judge of the Court of Appeal in Landshut, Bavaria, Federal Republic of Germany, and Dr. Ingo Kindler, Head of the Central Information Technology Centre of the Judicial Institutions of Bavaria, who presented the experience and good practices of introducing electronic case files in the courts and prosecution service of Bavaria.

During the training, participants discussed the legal and organizational aspects and technological solutions of electronic case files, the processes for electronically receiving, processing, storing and archiving cases and documents, and information security requirements, and exchanged views on the possibility of applying Bavaria's experience in the context of Mongolia.

This training was an important step towards preparing for the introduction of electronic criminal case files, enhancing the knowledge and skills of prosecutors and investigators, and establishing the legal, organizational and technical conditions for digital transformation.
