Primary Law on Family Court Proceedings Takes Effect from November 1, 2026

The primary Law on Family Court Proceedings will enter into force on November 1, 2026. In connection with the adoption of this law, amendments were made to the Criminal Code, the Criminal Procedure Law and other laws. Specific proposals submitted by the prosecution service on the draft law with the aim of protecting the rights of children in legal proceedings and preventing their violation were incorporated into the law.

How is the protection of children's rights reflected in the Criminal Code and the Criminal Procedure Law?

To ensure the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the principle of protecting the best interests of the child shall be upheld, whether the child is a victim of a crime or is involved in one. The law provides that juvenile suspects, accused persons and defendants shall be defined as “juveniles”, and that the rights and best interests of the juvenile shall be ensured when conducting proceedings and making decisions.
