Corruption Crimes Increased by 5.3 Percent

Within the framework of its work to ensure the implementation of criminal legislation, the prosecution service regularly studies the incidence and resolution of corruption crimes and is taking organizational measures to increase the resolution of such cases.

As of the third quarter of 2026, the prosecution service supervised 1,686 corruption cases, an increase of 85 cases, or 5.3 percent, over the same period of the previous year. Of these, 1104, or 65 percent, were committed in the capital city and 582, or 35 percent, in local areas.

Of the 418 cases investigated, indictments were issued and the cases transferred to court in 223, or 53.3 percent. By legal classification, the cases transferred to court comprise 146 cases of abuse of power or official position, 71 of accepting or giving bribes, 5 of illicit enrichment and 1 of misuse of budget funds.

In the course of the investigations, the transfer of real estate and vehicle registrations and of funds held in banks and other financial institutions worth 247 billion MNT was restricted, and assets worth 35 billion MNT were seized.
